- Communication is fundamental to human interaction, enabling the exchange of ideas, emotions, and information. Understanding its foundations is crucial for effective interpersonal and organizational communication.
- Communication involves a sender, a message, a channel, a receiver, and feedback. The principles include:
  - Shannon-Weaver Model: Focuses on the transmission of information through a channel.
  - Transactional Model: Emphasizes simultaneous sending and receiving of messages.
  - Social Learning Theory: Stresses learning through observation and modeling.
  - Cultural Approach: Considers communication as shaped by cultural norms and values.
- Several theories explain how communication works and evolves:
